BREED THEATER.

Red Eagle's Love Affair, Splendid Indian Drama.

One of the most beautiful photographic stories that could be imagined is the feature picture at the Breed theater for the first part of the week and is entitled Red Eagle's Love Affair, being a pretty romance of a young Indian fellow who wins the affection of a young lady from the east who is visiting at the ranch where he is employed. Being round-up time, all of the white employees are on the plains and the Indian is designated as a suitable escort to accompany the girl on her riding trips through the picturesque country. They become much attached to each other and when the girl leaves for her home the Indian leaves also, to improve his education at the Carlisle school. He is most successful there and before long wins the admiration of the girl whom he had learned to love while on the riding trips. Here he is met with scorn and she finds that she is a silly coquette, and tearing his school clothes from him, he hastens to his old home camp, where his faithful little Indian sweetheart awaits him with outstretched arms, presenting him with a new blanket made by herself. The picture closes with both of the happy and wiser ones enveloped in the gauzy Navajo covering.

The Biograph picture is entitled A Dash of Lightning, and tells of a strong drama that keeps the house interested all of the time.

John Morrissey, baritone, sang two illustrated songs very acceptably, winning repeated encores.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Pease Brook Lemon Again.

Mr. Editor—Another lemon plucked from the municipal garden where at present only lemons grow. Just as though we did not have a big enough one in our present gas and electric plant, not forgetting the superintendent of the same, not taking away from him any of the honor that belongs to him in that line. "Oh, that came good and was a good idea," said the present commander in the words of Paul, except these abide in the ship, we cannot be saved. But I am afraid from the present action of the democratic regime that no power in existence save that of Paul can pull the present crowd of misfits out of the sinking ship.

What does the Pease Brook game mean? A lot more legal and land option fees for somebody. I will not say for whom. The public can answer that question. We have seen enough to know by this time. It was indeed an intelligent piece of work for a new water board to fall to that kind of a recommendation without even having time or taking the trouble to investigate this important matter.

What will we get for our expenditure of $800,000 or a million dollars? (And no one knows but I will bet more, for as yet we have heard of no price set by the mill owners for rights on the stream.) No one can tell of increased revenue. If we need an increased water supply, why not go to the place where the city already has the rights? But I suppose the chief objection to that would be that no one on the inner circle would have a chance to bargain when they pass on the land, etc. And then another objection would be that the other plan would not cost half so much. What seems to suit best is to chance to spend money and talk about economy while they make jobs for men to hold down empty chairs in the city hall.

Our water supply is no shorter than in many other cities. That is what is heard on all sides. If we wish to conserve it, why not shut off the elevators and motors and street sprinkling, or send the latter to the river? And why sell water to the railroad when we need it so badly ourselves? Why do the big mogul engines come to Norwich when they pass by New London? We must be very charitable. If we need a larger water supply let us come to our senses, and when Pease Brook is brought before the people let us give that scheme the deepest grave which can be dug for it in Yankee cemetery.

With the other best citizens of Norwich, and then send our way for Gardner's lake by the Stony Brook route.

A DISGUSTED DEMOCRAT.

WOMEN SAVE THE CROP.

Kentuckian's Wife and Daughters Do the Work of Men.

Chilton Reed, a farmer and Confederate veteran, of Nicholasville, Ky., after trying in vain to hire farm hands, told his wife that he'd have to abandon his seven acres of tobacco to the weeds. Mrs. Reed donned an old dress and with her three daughters, slipped into the patch, while Mr. Reed's back was turned. When he saw the women at work Mr. Reed called to them to "come outen that." They laughed, and, seeing that it was impossible to dissuade them, he joined them, and at noon the patch was cleared of weeds.

"It is believed that many others will emulate their example of self-help," Mrs. Reed is the second wife of the Morgan raider. She was a Miss Gwyn, of the large and influential Gwyn family.

A Good Plan.

Mr. O'Rourke's plan to raise the Maine after the means used to erect the pyramids is undoubtedly a good one.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
